CHÂTEAU DE FONTAINEBLEAU · INSEAD MIM PRACTICUM · GROUP 11

Make the Château immersive and fun for children and families.

Leveraging Data for Marketing Science · Section E01 · 21 October 2026

The rooms are magnificent. To a nine-year-old they are a corridor of labels. The difference is not how much children's content exists. It is that a British child receives something physical, immediately, without a reservation — and that the thing they receive gives them a reason to come back.

Six ideas

One experience, from first contact to a returning family

01

School partnerships

Build recurring annual school relationships: curriculum-linked invitations, ready-to-use teacher materials, clear booking instructions and optional facilitated learning activities.

VALUE Annual cohorts, stronger school relationships and potential subsequent family visits.

02

Discovery passport

An illustrated passport at entry, with a route map, stamps, short historical stories and simple puzzles. Both print-on-request and accessible digital formats.

VALUE Better orientation, engagement and visibility of experiences that already exist.

03

Thirteen stations

Conservation-approved, low-maintenance clue points across selected rooms. Each reveals one letter of FONTAINEBLEAU; a free-garden bonus extends the adventure.

VALUE More active learning and exploration without constructing a new attraction.

04

Accessible storytelling

Replace selected text-heavy explanations with short stories;

05

Certificate and return

Finish with a no-purchase-required explorer certificate. School

STATION 4 · GALERIE FRANÇOIS I

A removable stand, a numbered sign and a self-inking press. Nothing is fixed to a historic wall or object.

The school-to-family growth engine

An end-to-end marketing activities plan

01
Recruit

Contact a pilot group of schools and teachers; offer a clear curriculum link and ready-made information.

02
Deliver

Students complete the discovery trail on their school trip and take home their passports.

03
Refer

A take-home invitation prompts a return visit with family members, and a new challenge.

04
Renew

Schools repeat the experience with next year's cohort; track referrals and rebookings.

€6,800

in potential additional gross adult ticket receipts. 40 classes × 25 pupils × 20% family return × 2 paying adults × €17 admission = 400 additional adult tickets.
